

OCCUPATIONAL HEALTH AND SAFETY POLICY CORPORATE STATEMENT

It is of the utmost importance that Acenta Steel Limited in the course of its business activities ensures a safe and healthy working environment for all its employees and visitors. Consequently Occupational Health and Safety (OH&S) is recognised as integral to business performance, and Acenta Steel Limited accepts this implies the corresponding duty of ensuring that adequate and appropriate resources are provided to implement this policy.

Whilst fulfilling this duty, we are committed to continuous improvement in our OH&S performance through a policy which is appropriate to the nature and scale of risks associated with site activities and adhering to this policy by:-

- Committing to comply with current applicable legislation, regulations and industry codes of best practice associated with OH&S and, where no legislation exists, endeavour to set group standards to meet our overall objective of improved OH&S performance;
- Ensuring that the management of OH&S is a prime responsibility of line managers from the most senior executive down to first line supervisors;
- Establishing, measuring, monitoring and auditing OH&S performance;
- Providing all employees with appropriate information and training to enable their active involvement in meeting our policy objectives;
- Communicating this policy to all employees and ensuring all employees are made aware of their individual OH&S obligations;
- Communicating this policy to all interested parties; and
- Periodically reviewing, revising and amending this policy and associated management systems to ensure they remain relevant and appropriate.
